Communion-Liturgies for the Living of These Days James A. Campbell

Fourteen liturgies for the living of these days. In a world spinning faster and faster, language is becoming more and more information. Our distracted, overstimulated minds find it more and more difficult to savor words, let alone words to nurture reverence that blesses us to receive the Word, to feel the Word, to become the living Word, the gospel unto the world. The size of the book pages, the size of its font, to the poetry of its expression across an open page, all combine to encourage us to slow down, to savor, that we might be more inclined to be at home and truly feast with our Lord. Let us be mindful that what is before us and all around us is the glory of God. With a foreword by Reuben P. Job.
